DICTUM OF CAMERA MAN

Woman Subject Required to Rest an Hour Before Posing for Picture.

Three o'clock was the hour of the busy woman's appointment with the photographer, but early in the day he telephoned for her to come at two o'clock. She went, and found him busy with another subject.

"I wanted you to come ahead of time," he said, "so you could lie down and rest for an hour. It is the hardest kind of work to get you busy people into a proper condition to be photographed. You rush around up to the last minute, then come here nervous wrecks and expect me to take good pictures. I can't do it. Nobody can. Tightly drawn lips, sunken eyes, and a generally tense expression don't look well in a photograph. You are a good looking woman and deserve good looking pictures, but you won't get them unless you rest an hour before facing the camera."

The woman appreciated the wisdom of his remarks, but she was so angry because she had been cheated out of a valuable hour that it was doubtful if the rest improved her appearance.

ONCE COSTLIEST OF WARES

Vessels of Odoriferous Clay So Rare Only Wealthiest Collectors Could Afford One.

Vessels of odoriferous clay were imported early in the sixteenth century from Peru, Chile and Mexico by the Portuguese merchants, to which were given the name of buccaros. So highly was this ware esteemed that only the wealthiest collectors could afford to possess entire specimens. Broken pieces were set in gold or silver or ground to powder to be used to scent cakes and confections and to perfume gloves and handkerchiefs. It was also supposed to possess medicinal properties and was prescribed by contemporary physicians for certain ailments. The great demand for the buccaros resulted in the alleged discovery of scented clays in Portugal and the potters of the time used them to fashion all sorts of drinking vessels, on which they impressed a seal or stamp, hence the adoption of the name terra sigillata.

TREE APPEARS TO BLUSH

Seeming Wonder of the Florida Swamps Really Has a Most Simple Explanation.

Among the many wonders of the vast Florida swamps there is nothing more surprising than the blushing tree. It actually blushes when the rain falls upon it. The mysterious and beautiful glow of color which it assumes in a rainstorm baffles description. As the rain drenches a tree, gradually, yet unmistakably, the green hue gives way to pink. In a few minutes the green fades from sight. Only in a few half-hidden spots, beneath broad branches and on the trunk, is there a tinge of green to be seen. The tree is as pink as the cheeks of the healthy girl. After an hour or more, when the shower is over, the tree assumes its familiar green once more. As it is changing back the spectator suddenly realizes the secret of the phenomenon. Certain tiny insects and not the tree itself change color. These peculiar parasites are possessed of the power of chameleons. In the bright warm sunshine they are greener than the tree on which they live, but when the chilly rain falls upon them they contract their tiny backs and become a pretty pink in tint. Millions of these change the color of the tree and make it appear to be blushing.

WOULD GIVE AID TO FALLEN

Chicago Judge Comes Forward With a Really Practical Idea of Needed Philanthropy.

A Chicago judge suggests a new duty for the courts. He says:

"It is all right for people who do not come in contact with these classes to say that there is plenty of work for the man that wants it, but when a man is down and out and has no place to go he needs some one to take an interest in him and get him braced up again."

And then the court suggests that some provision be made whereby it may assist the unfortunate man; give him some assistance, although the man may be down and out and hasn't a cent to pay a fee. For this duty there should be, it suggests, an attaché of the court to represent it and the certain influence it may carry in finding the man work. The unfortunate man himself, under such influence and care, might spruce up, do his work well and make something of himself.

A PLEA.

We wish to call attention to a form of cruelty which has now been going on for some time.

During the summer months many wives leave town and behind them, without or care, their husbands, who roam over the back yards, make night hideous by their wailings and subsist as best they can on the scraps thrown out by roof gardens.

A husband who has been well fed during the winter months and has been accustomed to a certain amount of luxury is suddenly thrust forth into an unknown world.

So far as we have ascertained, there seems to be no law that can reach the miscreants, who are guilty of this unnatural cruelty. The most that can be done is to make a general appeal to everybody.

Whenever you see a starving husband, with the corners worn off, wandering about the streets, take him in and give him a square meal. The Lord will reward you.—Life.

RAISING TURKEYS.

Nearly 800 wild turkeys were raised at the state game farm this season, and these birds will be turned at liberty in certain localities as soon as they are able to care for themselves. The commission will try to educate the public on the idea of giving these birds a chance to multiply. The birds raised in captivity have no fear of men, and as a result are easy prey to hunters.

The game and fish commission also proposes to furnish a pair or more of pheasants to anyone desiring them to raise in captivity, they agreeing to return a like number to the commission from the first hatching. By this means it is hoped to get these birds scattered throughout the state.—Sacramento correspondence San Francisco Chronicle.

A NEW KIND.

"Both these adjoining households have a sort of transposition envy of each other."

"How so?"
"Well, you see, one has a baby grand and the other a grand baby."

Worth Weight In Gold.

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie McCall, of this place, says, "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, but merited, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped them. What about you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1 bottles.

Humble Indian Tribe.

When the Quakers came to Pennsylvania in 1682 the only Indians in the neighborhood were the Delaware, who had just been terribly beaten by the Five Nations and forced into a treaty by which they submitted to be called women.
